Key legislation to watch entering the final weeks of Session

Last week saw the passage of the bill filing deadline in the Kentucky House of Representatives with a total of 838 bills introduced. The majority of this legislation is unlikely to pass before the end of Session, but a few key bills are worthy of consideration.

On February 26, multiple revenue bills were introduced making minor technical corrections to existing tax statute. HB743, HB744, HB745, and HB746 all received two of three readings required on the House floor for a vote, progressing through procedural measures to prepare the bills for amendments and passage. In addition to these bills, HB122 contains provisions related to the Kentucky Department of Revenue's administrative publications and also has two readings on the House floor. Look out for important revenue and tax updates in the coming weeks as these bills potentially move forward.

The highly anticipated local tax Constitutional amendment proposal was introduced via HB14. A similar measure progressed through the General Assembly during the 2022 Session but fell short of passage in the Senate. This year, supporters believe they have the momentum to pass the Constitutional amendment. As a refresher, the proposed amendment would allow local governments the ability to diversify revenue sources outside of occupational licensing fees, property, and insurance premium taxes. Proposed Constitutional amendments require the support of 3/5 of all members in each Chamber and a majority ratification by voters on the ballot in the November election. If passed by the General Assembly and ratified by the voters, HB724 provides statutory guidance requiring any new local taxes be authorized by the General Assembly and within the bounds of Kentucky's Constitution. This bill would become effective upon ratification of the local tax Constitutional amendment.

KyCPA leaves the decision to implement the Constitutional amendment and authorize new local taxes to policymakers and voters of the Commonwealth. As objective tax policy professionals, the Society remains committed to strengthening local tax uniformity within this context, which decreases the taxpayers' costs of compliance with the law, and the local districts' costs for collecting taxes, examining returns, and resolving disputes. KyCPA will continue to ensure uniformity, centralized collection, and sound tax policy are critical to any new local taxes considered by the General Assembly.

Last Wednesday, February 28, the bill filing deadline also passed in the Kentucky Senate with a total of 382 bills introduced. With multiple tax and business initiatives moving through the House, the Senate continues to review and consider the biennial budget proposals. Senate amendments will play key roles in the legislative process as bills move through the upper Chamber later in the Session.

With less than 20 business days left in this 60-day Session, remain vigilant by keeping up with our legislative update emails in the coming weeks.
